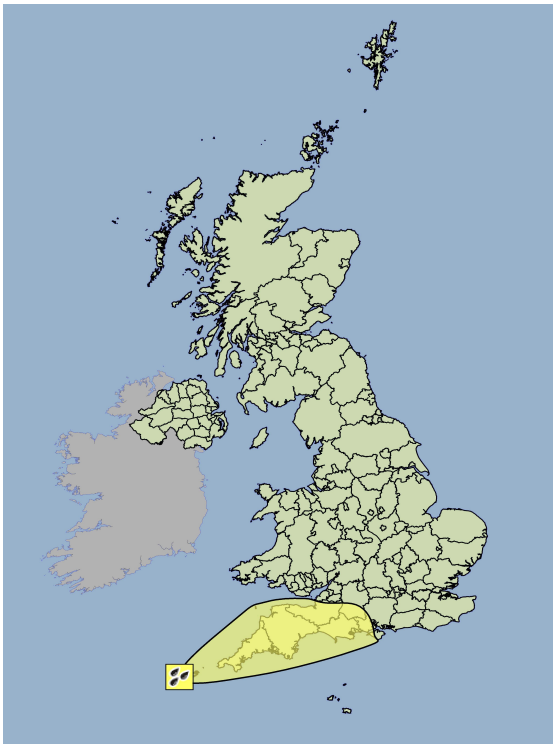
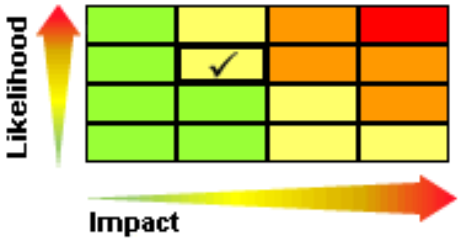
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Further frontal troughs will move eastwards across the UK during Friday, bringing further rain to many places.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 12:45 on Fri, 24th Jan 2014 until 23:45 on Fri, 24th Jan 2014

Bands of rain across southwest England have eased for a time but further rainfall is likely later. With the ground saturated over much of the region, the public should be aware of the risk of further local flooding and associated disruption, primarily in areas already affected by flooding.
This is an update to the warning issued on Thursday.
